JUDGE ALETA A. TRAUGER

JURY DEMAND

INITIAL CASE MANAGEMENT ORDER AS AMENDED BY THE COURT

A. JURISDICTION: The court has jurisdiction pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §§ 1331, 1343,

B. BRIEF THEORIES OF THE PARTIES:

1) PLAINTIFF: Plaintiff was hired by Defendants in approximately June 2010 as a Plant Supervisor. Plaintiff received all positive performance evaluations while employed by Defendant, and in June 2019, Plaintiff was “promoted” to Safety Coordinator. Despite Plaintiff’s numerous attempts to ensure Defendant’s compliance with OSHA/ TOSHA, Plaintiff’s concerns and remedies continued to be dismissed. On or about December 9, 2019, despite his numerous safety measures, Plaintiff injured his right hand while at work, Plaintiff’s injury needed nine (9) stitches and Plaintiff was placed on light duty. Despite Plaintiff’s request for reasonable accommodations for his work restrictions, Plaintiff was terminated on or about January 15, 2020. Plaintiff submits that due to not only his disability, but his numerous attempts to remedy various ongoing safety issues, he was retaliated against and ultimately terminated by Defendant.

2) DEFENDANT: Defendant moved Plaintiff to a Safety Coordinator position after he did not perform well in other positions. The move was not a promotion.

Plaintiff was empowered and expected to analyze safety issues and make improvements. Defendant was disappointed with his performance in this regard. Defendant did not obstruct him in this effort and instead encouraged him to engage in analysis, to communicate with managers as appropriate, and to implement improvements.

Plaintiff did make a few suggestions that did not make sense. For example, he suggested certain fall protection projects that were both expensive and unnecessary. Defendant's employees do not go on the roof, yet Plaintiff suggested a project regarding fall protection related to the roof and skylights. Defendant has one employee who infrequently works near the ceiling via scissor lift and has a harness system in place for this already. Accordingly, there was no reason to implement other protections.

Defendant was disappointed with Plaintiff's overall performance. This included Plaintiff engaging in a known unsafe act which resulted in his work injury. As the Safety Coordinator, Plaintiff should have followed all safety protocols, and he did not do so.

Defendant concluded that Plaintiff's performance was not satisfactory. That was the sole reason for discharge. Defendant did not discriminate based on disability. Plaintiff was not disabled, nor did his condition or injured status play any role in the decision. Defendant did not retaliate against Plaintiff for having sought workers' compensation benefits. Rather, his performance was the sole reason for the decision.
